

The prestigious Eko Club in Surulere, Lagos, has once again brought together prominent personalities, political figures, business leaders, and socialites for its grand induction ceremony for new members.

The event, held at The Arcade, popularly known as the House of Blessings, on Eko Club Close, off Bode Thomas Street, Surulere, celebrated friendship, unity, and the rich cultural heritage of Lagos. The ceremony attracted an array of distinguished guests, reflecting the club's longstanding reputation as a meeting point for influential figures across different sectors.

Traditional rulers, government officials, local government chairmen, and prominent business leaders have historically graced major events organised by the club.

Adding colour and excitement to the occasion were traditional music performances and cultural entertainment, creating an atmosphere of celebration and camaraderie.

Legendary Jùjú musician King Sunny Adé, popularly known as KSA, is among the celebrated performers associated with major Eko Club milestones and elite social gatherings. Guests turned out in elegant white outfits and traditional attire, adding glamour to the occasion.

Beyond the formal induction of new members, the event also featured the commissioning of the club's new Physical Access Control System and the launch of its community transit bus, marking significant developments in the club's operations and community engagement.

Founded in 1968 by indigenous Lagosians, Eko Club remains one of Lagos's prominent socio-cultural organisations, committed to fostering unity, preserving cultural heritage, and promoting socio-economic development.

With its blend of tradition, networking, and community service, the club continues to strengthen its position as a gathering place for influential personalities and a symbol of Lagos's enduring social and cultural identity.
