

The Lagos State Government, Babajide Sanwo-Olu took to his official handle to announce that he commissioned new hostel facilities at the Lagos State College of Nursing, Igando.

According to Sanwo-Olu, the hostels would provide a safe environment for the nurses, while also raising the standard for them to a modern one which is in an investment in the future of healthcare across the state.

He revealed that the facility has allocated the right spaces for different aspects of their training, which will enable them to live well, study better and thrive, resulting in greater benefits for the entire community.

“When our training healthcare professionals have the right space to live, study and thrive, the entire community benefits,” he said.

Sanwo-Olu also added that the state remains dedicated to providing improvements that directly affects residents by improving their quality of life.

“We are staying focused on delivering practical improvements that touch real lives,” he added.

The Governor asserted that the addition of every new facility, strengthens the administration’s mission of creating a better Lagos.

“Every new facility brings us one step closer to the strong, reliable Lagos we are building together.” he said.
